BLOCK GRAND TRUNK

(Continued from Page One) said, that the Grand Trunk had spent $2,000,000 on construction work at the time of the abandonment. Traffic Agreement.

The traffic agreement which Mellen said was to put the two roads "on a friendly relationship for 25 years," was the culmination, according to his testinony, of several conferences between imself, Smithers and Chamberlin. The trial adjourned today before it was put into evidence, but according to a letter prepared by Mellen on Oct. 29, 1913, to be sent to Chamberlin, it pro-vided that the Grand Trunk should oter New England "on the most favor. ed nation basis," which included joint trackage and traffic arrangements which gave the Grand Trunk access to the New Haven's territory. Mellen Could Not Recall Dates. The actual agreement was prepared by Edward D. Robbins, general coun-sel for the New Haven, he said, and was a revision of his own preparation. It was dated Nov. 15, 1913, and the government tried to bring out that it was between the two dates that the Grand Trunk abandoned its extension work and that the agreement was mod ified by Robbins in anticipation of the trouble that might be raised. But Mel-len said he could not recall the dates The government promised to other evidence. Real Fight Began in 1910. The real fight between the two roads appeared from Mr. Mellen's testimony, began in 1910, after a meeting between himself and the late C. H. Hays, then president of the Grand Trunk, as the result of which Mellen thought it had been arranged for the Grand Trunk to sell the New London Northern road to the New Haven and for the New Haven to transfer the New York, Ontario and Western to the Grand Trunk and thus settle their dif-ferences. Hays without any warning oon after "delivered his manfesto that he was going to build his exten-sion from Palmer, Mass., to Provi-dence, Mellen said. The New Haven, it appeared, then took steps to oppose the line. Because the Grand Trunk that pertained to the building in question, prior to being elected to the bench. Benvenuto had a licensed liquor saloon in Canal street, diagonally opposite the building in dispute and Egnenuto was a tenant of the rail-road company. The building where ized a counter-remonstration. Mellen said he turned the work over to Ben-jamin A. Kimball, president of the Concord and Montreal railroad, and A. W. Sulloway, president of the Northern New Hampshire railrad, both Boston and Maine subsidiaries. They were told, he said, among other things, "to secure protests from stock-holders of their roads as the Grand Trunk's attacks on their properties."

"I promised," Mellen said, "to reimburse them and did so to the extent of $50,000 or $60,000."

Steps to Parallel the C. V. The New Haven also took steps to extend to one of the subsidiary lines of the Boston and Maine near the New Hampshire border, known as the Sullivan county road, paralleling the Central Vermont, the Grand Trunk's

While the fight was going on C. 3 Hays lost his life on the Titanic and was succeeded by Mr. Chamberlin. Mellen wrote congratulating him on his accession and, as the result of further correspondence, Mellen, Smith-ers and-Chamberlin had a meeting in New York in the summer of 1912. "What did you talk about?" asked Attorney Batts for the government.

Reminiscent Conversation. "Oh, politics, religion, old times and some railroad business," replied Mr. Mellen. "Back in 1872 Chamberlin pany of Bristol, Va. was stenographer and I was clerk in the same railroad office in St. Albans, Vt., and we talked about how we used Dyestuff and Chemical company, which recently established a plant at Kingsport, will manufacture pieric acid a base for high explosives, it was announced by Allison M. to refresh my memory." He added that the colored man had since died "scared to death on account of the attack they made on him." This memorandum proposed certain traffic agreements and an arrangement whereby in five years the Grand Trunk "would be in the same position" as if it had built its own lines in New England, "Was the Providence extension under construction at this time?" he was "Yes," said Mr. Mellen.

Morgan Wanted New London Northern It turned out, however, that this proposition was not satisfactory to the Grand Trunk and on October 1st, thethree men had another meeting at which the late J. P. Morgan unexpect-edly appeared. Morgan, said Mellen, insisted that the Grand Trunk should keep its old promise to sell the New on Northern. "After Mr. Morgan went out," con-tinued the witness, "I told Mr. Smith-ers and Mr. Chamberlin that Mr. Morgan did not understand the difficulties in the situation and that if they wantd to continue the negotiations on the hasis that we didn't want the New London Northern, we would proceed." The negotiations were resumed, it was brought out, and led to the final Was the Providence branch dis-

Avenue Extension Assessments. Willimantic, Dec. 2.—The special meeting of the board of aldermen was held Thursday evening to consider the petition of Mrs. Orra A. Bill, Miss Maud E. Alfred and William A. Lason for a reassessment of benefits and damages on the Lebanon avenue extension. It was voted to stand by the action of the street committee, which awarded $150 to Mr. Lason and nothing to the other two. Previous to the discussion of this question a list of abatements of taxes was presented by J. G. Lapaime, city tax collector, the same amounting to $115.73, on the list of 1913, which were granted. Lebanon avenue matter was then taken up and the petitioners heard. Mrs. Bill asked for a faced stone wall and Miss Alfred said she would be satisfied with a cement wall. Mr. Lason, who at Monday's meeting Lason, who at Monday's meeting claimed $450 damages, stated that the contractor had made a mistake and he asked for $155 damages. City Engineer R. E. Mitchell explained the cuts necessary in front of the three properties ties and stated that he thought $150 sufficient for the walls on Mr. Lason's place. Mayor Dunn stated that he had obtained estimates for walls in front of the other two places and that they could be built for $75 in front of the Bill place and $50 in front of Miss Alfred's Alderman Graves said if Lason got anything the others should get something, but Alderman Caisse stated that the property would benef more than those amounts as a resu of having the street maintained by th ity in front of their property.
